LAPL - Undergrad Student

Undergrad Student

USC student, late teens/early 20s. Mobility and time are issues in getting to the Library. Not at the Library as frequently. Not sure about topics for research, less directed than grad students. Often here on class assignment, often in a group. Not so familiar with archival research. Comfortable using Internet for searches.

KEY WORDS

- Mid education level
- High level of comfort with technology
- Not familiar w/ library procedures
- Not a frequent Library user but potential big user of a Library website with content and functionality that meet his needs

Scenario

- USC undergrad student is writing a paper on black activists in Los Angeles. Because he does not live in New York, he cannot physically obtain the materials so he wishes to access them online or request copies to be sent. Although he is comfortable with using the internet, he is not familiar with using online libraries for research. With the paper due soon, he wants to be able to quickly gather information.
- Red are comments about what the user may be thinking or doing
- Blue are comments about the site format

Good amount of tabs (not too overwhelming).

Site is kind of in an F-shaped layout with various tabs at the top and the left. Left tabs are a bit much and don't seem to be in any order.

Not exactly sure why there's so much space on the left and right side. Maybe it would be better if there was something there, like a picture, instead of it just being a block of solid color. It makes all the page material fall into the center of vision, but it's a lot of space not being used.

All library facilities will be closed Monday, March 26, for César Chávez Day.

Status update stands out at the top.

Catalog search stands out with its own block of color. Information about what's in the catalog search will be useful (only library books or other material too?)

Landing page provides lots of info about the library in a mostly enjoyable format. The use of pictures for most things makes it more enjoyable.

"Collections & Resources" seems like the most likely place to find research material out of the tabs, although the name doesn't tell me much. I'll click on that.

Color change to let users know which tab these subcategories came from. Good choice of colors to represent the active vs inactive tabs; white is bright and the pale green draws less attention because there is not much contrast between it and the background color.

There's a bit many subcategory, and the fact that there are lines separating each column that almost follows the lines separating the tabs above them is a bit confusing (makes it look a little bit like these are the subcategories of other tabs).

Not sure about the differences between "Research & Homework" and "Research Guide". Homework sounds like it's for younger students (high school and below), so I'll click on "Research Guide" and will hopefully learn how to get research material from the library.

Exploring African-American Ingenuity in Science & Technology: Part of An African Heritage

"Once the perspectives accepted until now by official science have been reversed, history of humanity will become clear and the history of Africa can be written."

CHEIKH ANTA DIOP

Introduction

Much is said and written about African-Americans shaping the popular culture of the United States with their endeavors in sports and entertainment. However, the same fervor of attention is not given to people of African descent participating in the world of science and innovation. There are a significant number of African-Americans making notable accomplishments as astronauts, chemists, inventors, information technology specialists, neurosurgeons, cancer specialists, electronic engineers and holistic practitioners centered in the African tradition of healing.

Over the past century, African and African-American scholars—Cheikh Anta Diop, Ivan Van Sertima, Charles S. Finch, Beatrice Lumpkin, Wini Warren, and Hattie Carwell, to name a few—continued to recover omitted, distorted, lost and suppressed histories about Africa's true gifts to humanity from past Black civilizations of Egypt, Ethiopia, Kenya, Tanzania, Mali and Ghana. The coalescence of this reclaimed information interestingly suggests a traceable lineage of African creativity and ingenuity that managed to survive and flourish despite the evil and violent institution of slavery. Today, communities worldwide continue to benefit from the ingenious heritage of African people.

Objective and Scope

A selection of resources in print, electronic and video formats were brought together in this guide for the purpose of assisting Los Angeles Public Library (LAPL) users in their search for materials documenting those original fruits in science, health, medicine and innovation contributed by Africans, their descendants in North America and throughout various parts of the African global community. Sources highlighted include essays and monographs, which often time exist hidden between the pages of magazines and journals or buried in chapters of books with seemingly unrelated titles. Although items cited can primarily be found in the Science, Technology and Patents Department of the Central Library, others have been identified from collections in the Social Sciences, Philosophy and Religion Department (located on lower-level three) and the History and Genealogy Department (located on lower level four).

Some resources for this weblography were identified by searching over four decades worth of entries from the Index to Black Periodicals (housed in the Social Sciences Department on lower-level three, call# 326.973 O37) and conducting reviews of LAPL's online catalog. The remaining sources were actually "hand-picked" during painstaking, cursory manual examinations of sections within the Science department. This resource guide was divided into two parts: Part I, traces the legacy of African Science and Innovation; and Part II—explores both male and female African-American inventors and scientists. All sources were briefly annotated.

Part I: African Science and Innovation

Books: Focusing on African Science and Technology

There's nothing I want here. Going to access the "Research & HW".

Information about the research guide, but it's a bit long. Think some people might want to view the items first/have a shorter introduction. It'd be nice if there was an option somewhere to hop to various parts of the page.

Page has a list of books to gain more info about the topic. They're all physical though.

Summary

"Drugs as Weapons Against Us" meticulously details how a group of opium-trafficking families came to form an American oligarchy and eventually achieved global dominance. This oligarchy helped fund the Nazi regime and then saved thousands of Nazis to work with the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA operations such as MK-Ultra pushed LSD and other drugs on leftist leaders and left-leaning populations at home and abroad. Evidence supports that this oligarchy further led the United States into its longest-running wars in the ideal areas for opium crops, while also massively funding wars in areas of coca plant abundance for cocaine production under the guise of a "war on drugs" that is actually the use of drugs as a war on us. "Drugs as Weapons Against Us" tells how scores of undercover U.S. Intelligence agents used drugs in the targeting of leftist leaders from SDS to the Black Panthers, Young Lords, Latin Kings, and the Occupy Movement. It also tells how they particularly targeted leftist musicians, including John Lennon, Jimi Hendrix, Kurt Cobain, and Tupac Shakur to promote drugs while later murdering them when they started sobering up and taking on more leftist activism. The book further uncovers the evidence that Intelligence agents dosed Paul Robeson with LSD, gave Mick Jagger his first hit of acid, hooked Janis Joplin on amphetamines, as well as manipulating Elvis Presley, Eminem, the Wu Tang Clan, and others.
