NYPL - Undergrad Student

Undergrad Student

USC student, late teens/early 20s. Mobility and time are issues in getting to the Library. Not at the Library as frequently. Not sure about topics for research, less directed than grad students. Often here on class assignment, often in a group. Not so familiar with archival research. Comfortable using Internet for searches.

KEY WORDS

- Mid education level
- High level of comfort with technology
- Not familiar w/ library procedures
- Not a frequent Library user but potential big user of a Library website with content and functionality that meet his needs

Scenario

- USC undergrad student is writing a paper on black activists in Los Angeles. Because he does not live in New York, he cannot physically obtain the materials so he wishes to access them online or request copies to be sent. Although he is comfortable with using the internet, he is not familiar with using online libraries for research. With the paper due soon, he wants to be able to quickly gather information.
- Red are comments about what the user may be thinking or doing
- Blue are comments about the site format

Description 1 online resource (xv, 308 pages) : illustrations.

Bibliography Includes bibliographical references (pages 281-300) and index.

Contents Introduction: Black power and the American political mainstream -- A mouthful of civil rights and an empty belly?: the war on poverty and the fight for racial equality -- Community development corporations, black capitalism, and the mainstreaming of black power -- Black power and battles over education -- Black mayors and black progress: the limits of black political power.

Access Access restricted to authorized users.

Summary "The traditional narrative of the civil rights movement has been that the more moderate demands of the mainstream movement, including Martin Luther King Jr., worked, but that the more "radical" demands of the Black Power movement derailed further success. Mainstreaming Black Power upends the traditional narrative by showing how Black Power Activists in New York, Atlanta, and Los Angeles during the 1960s through the 1970s navigated the nexus of public policies, black community organizations, elected officials, and liberal foundations. Tom Adam Davies unites local and national perspectives and reveals how the efforts of mainstream white politicians, institutions, and organizations engaged with Black Power ideology, and how they ultimately limited both the pace and extent of change."--Provided by publisher.

In the early morning hours of December 8, 1969, hundreds of SWAT officers engaged in a violent battle with a handful of Los Angeles-based members of the Black Panther Party for Self-Defense (BPP). Five hours and 5,000 rounds of ammunition later, three SWAT team members and three Black Panthers lay wounded. For the Panthers and the community that supported them, the shootout symbolized a victory, and a key reason for that victory was the actions of a 19-year-old rank-and-file member of the BPP: Wayne Pharr. Nine Lives of a Black Panther tells Pharr's riveting story of life in the Los Angeles branch of the BPP and gives a blow-by-blow account of how it prepared for and survived the massive attack. He illuminates the history of one of the most dedicated, dynamic, vilified, and targeted chapters of the BPP, filling in a missing piece of Black Panther history.

SHOWDOWN AT SUNRISE

We were at Jerry's house, listening to 'Trane, smoking weed, and playing chess when I told my crew that G—Elmer "Geronimo" Pratt—had given me the go-ahead to implement a new tactic of defense. We needed to find more ways to protect the Los Angeles branch of the Black Panther Party from the Los Angeles Police Department and other forces waging war against us. I had been toying with the idea of plotting an escape route through the sewers from the Party's headquarters on Forty-First Street and Central Avenue. The sewers could serve as a hiding place and even a point of attack if necessary. "I think we can go in on 120th and Central," I told them.

"Naw," said Baba as he inhaled a joint. "I know a way that's closer." He squeezed the answer out, exhaling the smoke through his nostrils.

Baba wasn't a Panther—he was a member of the Black Student Alliance, an organization of Black Student Unions throughout Los Angeles. He also belonged to the United Front, an umbrella organization with a black-socialist orientation. Ronald "Baba" Preston was one of the most intelligent people I'd ever met. He was tall and thin, a build that

► The Human Experience Through Primary Sources

Archives are the records created by people and organizations as they lived and worked. Collections can range in size from a single letter or diary to thousands of boxes of institutional records. They can contain drafts of literary works, financial records, meeting minutes, reports, memorabilia, as well as sound recordings, videos, film, databases, and software.

On this site, you can search The New York Public Library's vast holdings, initiate a research visit, submit a query to an archivist, and access digitized material.

Think the "Using the collection" section might be a bit redundant since it states it up top. Maybe it can link back up to the top instead of adding a new section with similar information.

This top section doesn't stand out that much though except for the white box. Maybe give it a heading saying summary or overview so that the heading catches the eye?

The records of the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), 1966-1984, document the origin and development of the organization within the context of the social and religious turmoil of the late 1960s, a period which gave rise to Third World theological perspectives, and the radical critique of racism and materialism in American society. IFCO records consist of files for the various programs and projects IFCO developed to assist poor and disadvantaged peoples gain justice, self-determination and economic independence, primarily in the United States, and to a lesser extent, Africa. Included are hundreds of proposals submitted by community, educational, health care and other organizations to IFCO's Grant Making Program, which provide documentation of community empowerment organizations in the United States from the mid-1960s through the mid-1970s.

BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL INFORMATION

The Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO) is an interdenominational "parachurch" agency, created in late 1966 to open lines of communication between mainstream American churches and disenfranchised minority communities in the United States. Established by the United Presbyterian Church, the original membership consisted of nine religious groups and one foundation, only one of which represented a minority community. By the mid-1970s, however, IFCO had developed into the largest minority-controlled foundation in the country.

IFCO was a logical outgrowth of policies pioneered by the Board of National Missions of the United Presbyterian Church which, in April 1966, directed its Division of Church Strategy and Development to "pursue cooperation with other interested denominations in establishing and funding enabling structures for training organizers and for united support of local community projects". It's a bit weird how the archives portal has a different theme to the research catalog and the articles and databases search.

Search page for articles and databases has clearer filter options than the research catalog, and it also has more filter options than the archives. It's a bit weird how the archives portal has a different theme to the research catalog and the articles and databases search.

I put in information that I think will give me good results for my paper.

It turns out that my results are too specific. Going to delete my line in "Database title/description". I guess that is too specific for a single database.

Apparently it is still too specific. Resetting the filter on "Audience" back to all. Not exactly sure why there is an audience option (includes "Adults", "Businesspeople", "Small business owners", "Children", "School age", "Teachers", and "Teens".)

Same situation as the last time. I don't have a library account. Maybe I'll make one since it seems like I can access a lot more materials with an account.

This page could be a pop-up instead of its own page. It would save time because users wouldn't have to wait for the page to load, and they could exit the pop-up to immediately go back to where they were before
